(See page 2 for more information.)

Dr. Tricia Jones from Temple University and CEO of Conflict Coaching Matters LLC will join us to discuss emotional labor and how it affects women in the workplace. We will explore gender roles and emotion, including:

- What are women generally expected to do (and how are they judged)?
- How do these gender differences affect us in the workplace?
- How do women navigate the tightrope of being either too feminine or too masculine?
- What are the consequences of emotional labor on our psychological and psychosocial health?

This interactive session will provide attendees with new ideas about how women in the law and related professions can reduce the consequences of emotional labor in our workplace, as well as how to deal with difficult situations involving these issues.

Registration deadline: March 19, 2018
