

Penn State Dickinson Students Honored

PBA Pro Bono Coordinator David Trevaskis joined other public interest leaders in honoring students of the Miller Center for Public Interest Advocacy at the Penn State University Dickinson School of Law, Carlisle, on April 7. Trevaskis's remarks on the importance of pro bono service and access to justice were simulcast to students and faculty at the school's State College campus as students there also received recognition.

Pictured, from left, are Katherine Fitz-Patrick, president, Public Interest Law Fund; Sam Milkes, executive director, Pennsylvania Legal Aid Network (PLAN); Robert Kleiner, Miller Center public interest advocate; Cynthia Newcomer, PLAN chief administrative officer; Valerie Burch, ACLU Harrisburg staff attorney; Kate Cramer Lawrence, Penn State Dickinson public interest and clinical teaching fellow; and David Trevaskis, PBA pro bono coordinator