

Casemaker Launches Next Generation Research Platform PBA Members Now Have Free Access to Casemaker4

HARRISBURG (June 3, 2019) -- All Pennsylvania Bar Association members now have free access to Casemaker4, the next generation legal research platform from Casemaker, which features a redesigned user interface and leverages improved search speed and more intuitive site navigation to deliver faster results.

To try Casemaker4, simply log in to Casemaker through the PBA website as you normally would, and then click the link provided.

“We are thrilled to announce the release of Casemaker4,” said Sarah Gorman, chief operating officer at Casemaker. “The new platform is informed by several years of user feedback and an extensive beta testing process. The response from the last round of beta was overwhelmingly positive and we are extremely excited to now open up Casemaker4 to our entire subscriber base.”

Expanded feature functionality on Casemaker4 includes a new Alerts feature that enables you to have new developments in areas of interest delivered straight to your in box; an expanded Search Input Box with an Advanced Search option; predictive “Type Ahead” functionality; and the incorporation of intelligent algorithms to suggest related primary and secondary materials not previously displayed.

What hasn’t changed with the launch of Casemaker4? The expert care and handling of legal content by editorial staff that has long distinguished Casemaker among legal research providers. Now, with Casemaker4, you can get the best of both worlds: a much-improved platform with state-of-the-art functionality, and content you can rely on with confidence. Try it today!
