

Top 10 Reasons to Join the Pennsylvania Bar Association Animal Law Committee

What, you didn't know that PBA had an Animal Law Committee?

10. Finally get a chance to do something with your law degree that you actually like!

9. Do you hate puppy mills? Compadre!

8. 33 animal-related bills were introduced in the Pennsylvania General Assembly during this session alone. Don't you want to know what they cover?

7. Gives you something to talk about at dinner parties.

6. Connects you to other attorneys who also keep a lint brush in their office desk drawer.

5. You can keep up with your favorite cases from Property Law class.

4. Because you'd like to be able to answer:

- Can a pit bull be a service animal?
- How can someone provide for her pet after death?
- What's the legal difference between a dog and a lamp?
- Is a person who videotapes animal cruelty a terrorist?

3. Free lunch at every meeting (there is such a thing...!)

2. The annual Animal Law CLE (now in its 11th year) is more fun than the panel on Important Developments in Reinsurance Coverage (sorry insurance guys, but it's true).

1. Looks more professional on your resumé than a picture of your dog.

Not already a member of the Pennsylvania Bar Association? Here's why you should join:

- Discounts on the things you already use, like insurance, practice management software, credit card processing, conference call services, computers, office supplies, car rentals, and even clothing.
- Free access to Casemaker™, a web-based legal research tool with a suite of premium services.
- Unsurpassed networking through over 50 committees and almost 20 sections.
- Plus much more! For more information or to join, go to www.pabar.org.
